Companies listed on the Hong Kong stock exchange enjoy access to a wide range of investors who could help fuel business growth. But all of the benefits that flow from the listing can come to an abrupt end if the Stock Exchange of Hong Kong decides to delist the company. What remedies are available to companies in this situation? In seeking to overturn the decision, what factors are relevant and what can we observe from past cases?

Join Hectar Pun SC, Richard Yip and Keith Cheung to understand:

- How the Listing Committee approaches delisting decisions
- Appeals before the Listing Review Committee
- Judicial review against SEHK's cancellation of listings
- What legal practitioners should note
